

About ordinary wonderful:

It is a personal blessing to be able to find the beauty in the ordinary everyday things around us. From railroad tracks to garbage cans and window gates - you would never guess that the images in this show were all shot in Brooklyn. As busy New Yorkers, it's hard to take our time to enjoy the world we live in with all its wonders. Taking a moment to watch a Brooklyn sunrise could be much better than a cup of coffee. Even our local eateries with backyard gardens become magical places in the right light. With this collection, artist Trevor Brown encourages all of us to take a moment to enjoy the beauty around us that we see every day, but too often take for granted.

Trevor has lived in Brooklyn cumulatively for sixteen years. He doesn't own a television or cell phone and drinks water from the tap. He resides in Prospect Heights, and can be reached through his website www.trevorbrownonline.com.

By 'breaking down the walls' of the traditional private art gallery, the Myrtle Windows Gallery brings two-dimensional art to the public arena via the storefront window, where it is accessible to anyone simply walking down the street. The initiative helps bring together artists, local businesses, and the community in a dialogue about art in public spaces. Myrtle Windows Gallery is part of the Myrtle Avenue Brooklyn Partnership's new Public Art Program which brings studio art, sculpture, events, music and creative street furniture elements to the public spaces and sidewalks of the 20-block retail district, establishing the avenue as an access point to art and culture for the entire community.
